Eighty of these have been received within the four months since the first Sabbath of last November. The church has received nto its membership 219 persons since the resent pastor took charge of it-a little ver one year and ten months ago. The hurch is one of the most united and harnonlous, and its prospect of continued growth is full of promise. The present enrolled communicant membership is 664.

A DAYLIGHT ROBBERY.

Yesterday morning a bold robbery was Mrs. H. A. Todd, of South Seneca street, lost between $30 and $40 in cash. The family were all away from the house and the doors were not all locked. A man carrying a grip and an umbrella was seen of the neighbors to enter the house. He remained for some time and then came out and left. No one thought strange of this as it was supposed he was an acquaintance of the family.

When the members of the family came home near noon the loss was discovered. The fellow had also helped himself to peaches and cream and generous supply of cake which he found in a cupboard and probably went away congratulating himself that he would be ahead 25 cents of his ill gotten gains, which he would probably have spent for a dinner.

On Sunday morning last at about 9:30 the usual quiet of the day was broken by a quartet of professional fake foot racers, who began with a war of words, finally ending in a sprinting match and the arrest and incarceration of one of their number. Frank Lewis, the man arrested, was accused by Dave Carter of appropriating to his own use $100 given him to bet on a foot race. Carter, who is said to be somewhat of a sprinter, is from Cottonwood Fails, made a verbal report, stating that there and was accompanied by Hen Meredith, was much improvement in the work of also a sprinter, and a sawed-off supposed all around sport, who was presumably carried along for the immense amount of chin music he was able to furnish. Unable to get the money from Lewis by en-treaty, Meredich made a grab for his grip, when Lewis darted away running south on Main and west toward the river, Officer Dennis took a hand in the sprinting and was joined by Deputy Sheriff Dadisman. Lewis finally reached a livery barn on West Douglas and was safely hidden in a buggy, where he was discovered by Dadisman and taken to jail. With the exception of Carter the balance are said to be traveling under assumed names. This is some of the same outfit that visited Wichita not long ago and bled some of the young boys around town who had been boasting of their sprinting qualities. CITY TEACHERS' MEETING.

The monthly institute of city teachers was held on Sunday, from 9 a. m. to 12 m. prayer, followed by roll call and the reading of the minutes of the previous session.

Dr. Stevenson presented, as the first of a series, a paper on the "History of education during the colonial period." The subject was discussed under the following heads: First, origin of free schools; second, the provided by the second of three years—thus training many to go into other parts of the great city, with the knowledge that has healing in its wings. If it shall be possible to secure this paper, in leaflets, the union will cause them to be freely distributed. history of school legislation in the thirteen colonies: third, scholars, fourth, teachers; fifth, school appliances. Origin of our free school system was traced to Holland. In New England the laws made provision for the maintenance of free schools from the first. In Virginia the dispersed social condition prevented the formation of schools for three generations.

In the discussion of this paper Professor South spoke of the great gap between the grammar and the high school course. He illustrated this point by comparing arithmetic and algebra.

Miss Dickinson maintained that more is needed in the grammar grades; also, that the algebra is too difficult. Mr. Yowell agreed as to lack of time, but held that a mastery of the arithmetic

Dr. Stevenson closed the discussion by saying that these same criticis ms have always been made, that a sifting process is constantly going on, that algebra is easier than arithmetic in parts and that the main gap lies in the very condition of things

To the Editor of the Eagle. Sarah Jane Stimson Reeves was born May 10, 1827, near Halifax Court House, Virginia, and died Feb. 26, 1891, in her 64th year of consumption. She bore her affliction without a murmur for five years and was confined to her bed for five months prior to her death. She was married Aug. 25, 1864, to John H. She endured the hardships of a widowed life ourageously and was never heard to complain of the burdens she had to assume a caring for the family. Her sole object in caring for the family. ACCEPTANCE.

To the Editer of the Eagle: To the honorable gentlemen who signed petition asking me to allow my name to be used as a candidate for mayor:

After thanking you for the call I take pleasure in accounging that after mature deliberation I have decided to accept, and will make the race for that position.

A due regard for your desires in the matter will be my excuse for formulating a few planks upon which I shall stand during the contest. I am opposed to paying nearly one hundred per cent more wages for official work than is paid for similar labor by our

I am in favor of an economic administration of the city affairs, and reducing all expenses to the minimum.

I am in favor of all necessary improvements where Wichita material and labor can be utilized, but opposed to any schemes that must be fostered by taxation, to purchase foreign material and import foreign labor simply for the reason that those laboring men who have staked their all in purchasing Wichita property, should be given the preference and be kept employed if possible.

As the candidate of the people I intent to make a clean race—treating all my opponents as gentlemen, and shall ask the same consideration towards myself.

Again thanking you for this expression of your confidence in my ability and integrity, you will pardon me for expressexpenses to the minimum.

AMUSEMENTS.

The truly sensational play "Fabio Romani" drew only a small audience at the Crawford Grand last evening. The play is a dramatization, by Aiden Bene-dict, of the novel, "The Vendetta," and partakes largely of the idea of "Monte Cristo." In fact, it seems as if that work had furnished the idea completely. Much ependence is also placed upon the scenic effects for success. The company, with one or two exceptions, was decidedly weak. The engagement was for one night only.

"A Social Session" was given at Turn hall last evening before a large audience. As a musical farce, "A Social Session" is a success. There is less horse play than in most of the farces of the Hoyt order, and consequently less coarseness in the general presentation of the play; the dialogue is bright, and is not marred by ancient jokes. The stage business is original, and the songs, both topical and selected, are in keeping with the general construction of the play. There is no plot to speak of, and a heavy one would be out of place in "A Social Session." Its mission is to amuse, and this it does throughout the performance. One feature of this company, which is new, is the instrumental musical specialties, by the members of the company's own orchestra. The engagement was for one night only.

The Antiquity of the Kiss. The mutual kiss of affection or passion by the hips between persons of opposite sex is generally considered to be instinctive. Reichenbach sought to explain it on the theory that the mouth was the focus of his "odic force," and that these two foci of opposite sexes possessed natural attraction to each other. The fact that the mutual kiss between opposite sexes is not general among the tribes of men is abundantly shown by the observations of travelers in the lands where savagery and barbarism still exist. Where it is now practiced it is not probably of great antiquity. In some languages, notably the Japanese, there is no word for kiss. When, however, the kiss was introduced to include women its vegue, like that of other new inventions, was carried to exnius, it was unknown in England until the Princess Rowens, the daughter of King Hengist, of Friesland, instructed the insular Vortigern in the imported salute Though the Saxon statistics are not prob ably exact, it is historical that in England not many generations ago it would have been the imperative duty of a visitor to have kissed all the ladies of the household, even without previous acquaintance. Such was the experience of many surprised literary foreigners, notably Erasmus. The contemporary drama shows the usage to have lasted into the Georgian era, and it is to be noticed that the performance was salute."-Popular Science Monthly.

Housewives' Drawback to a Rig Dinner. No wonder the average housewife detests dishwashing. If the water is to cold it requires more work to remove the grease, and if it is too hot it scales the hands, and in any case it is a dirty, tedious piece of drudgery which women perform simply because it has to be done. ing a meal exercises the reflective and constructive faculties; it brings its own reward in merited encomiums, social gratitude and beatific digestion. But the leansing of dishes is an anti-climax. It is like the feeling that obtrudes itself on person who has made a successful hit in ife-the thought that he must leave this gay and happy scene and pass into the portals of the unknown.

When the ancient Egyptians gave a sumptuous feast and the social rapture vas at its highest point they had a habit of carrying the mummified remains of heir ancestors through the banqueting hall to bring the host and guests into a more sober frame of mind and remind them that they were mortal. In these lat ter days we don't practice this grewsome ceremony, but to the average housewife who can't afford a servant comes the knowledge of the inevitable, the under lying feeling that all the satisfactions and glories of a dinner must end in the prosate rattle of crockery, removal of grease and scalding of hands. - Detroit News

Steering Clear of Sin. Milkman-Johnny, did you put water in the milk this morning?

New Assistant-Yes, sir. "Don't you know that is wicked, Johnny?"

"But you told me to mix water with the milk." "Yes, but I told you to put the water in first and pour the milk into it. Then, you see, we can tell the people we never put water in our milk."—Texas Siftings.

The depositors in a private institution in a Kansas town were getting ready to make a run, as the banker was reported short, but before they could do so he left by way of the back door, and took all the cash in his carpet-bag. He reasoned that in his case it was better to run than be run on .- Detroit Free Press.

217 East Douglas. A Matter of Money. Young people of both sexes should early be taught the use of money, and to rightly know its value they should be given ways of earning it, to spend, within reasonable limits as they choose. Much of the work which even little children do in the shape of chores around the house ought to be paid for, as perhaps a better way of getting money into a child's hand than any other. It is very demoralizing to beg, and the child that is encouraged or even allowed to get its spending money in this way is laying up a poor foundation for after life.

On the farm the means for earning money should as much as possible be based on farm operations. When the boys see in their own pockets some of the me by farming they will take more interest in their daily work. Unless parents who are farmers desire to discourage their some from following this business they should be allowed to do something each year on their own accepts and have the money they thus make. The little thus earned early by themselves will be worth a houdred times as much as if left to them after the death of their parents, who had pre-viously keps them ignorant of any practi-cal knowledge of the value of money and its uses.—Herald of Health.
